

Opening up to new possibilities

Children from all different backgrounds come together at the Sanford Center. And that means children with different personalities.

During the summer program, staff noticed one very shy boy who didn't talk very much or play with the other children.

At the Sanford Center, staff strive to teach respect, passion, commitment, and the importance of relationships and community.

Staff said as the summer went along, the young man began to break out of his shell. He became more active, and started forming some important friendships.

Sanford Center
Building Community

**This photo has been changed
to protect the identity of the client.*

United Way of Siouxland

